CLASS 1 HANDOUT

Safe People & the Color Code

Finding Peace Within

Safe People Are

- People who react to you in a different way than those who injured you. Use your memory to tell the difference.
- People, who, over time, have a loving track record. See if their walk matches their talk.
- People who can be observed from some emotional distance. Take small risks in vulnerability before taking bigger risks.
- People with the ability to accept imperfections in others. This refers to the difference between those who love the outside and those who love the inner self.
- People who are no stranger to pain, yet are recovering. Those who have suffered spiritually and emotionally can identify with developmental injuries.
- People who are aware of their own deficits. Those who know their unfinished parts are more likely to be safe with the unfinished parts of others.
- People who have truth without condemnation. It's easier to entrust our weaknesses to those who love us, and who will speak the truth in love
- People who have grace without license. Attaching to others who see grace as leading to greater responsibility helps us to experience grace appropriately.
- People who bring out your best in life. Ask yourself if your relationship with this person has made you more or less loving and responsible.

Break the dysfunctional family rules of "don't talk, don't trust, don't feel", by actively seeking a confessional relationship. Generally, a "safe" person will give you permission (when you can't give it to yourself) to be human. Safety is measured by our ability to be who we really are with a particular person or in a certain setting - a place where we can talk about our fears, our feelings, our experiences without being judged or shamed.

There are safe people and safe places. To find them you must take a risk. Share; check; share. We are created not to be dependent or independent, but interdependent. Don't expect perfection from yourself or from others, but look for a realistic "good enough."

Whatever is unconfessed is beyond the reach of healing. The isolated injury that stays hidden feels "bad." The injury that is connected feels loved.

From Hiding From Love by Dr. John Townsend

"Because you love them, does not make them safe."

Exercise: Safe people check

Think of 2–3 people in your life. Write their names at the top, then check the traits each one shows. Use the last column for yourself.

Safe people are…	_____	_____	_____	Me
Reacts to me differently than those who hurt me
Has a loving track record over time
Can be observed from some emotional distance
Accepts imperfections in others
Knows pain, and is recovering
Is aware of their own deficits
Has truth without condemnation
Has grace without license
Brings out my best

1. Which of these traits do I show to others?

2. Who in my life feels safest, and why?

New to the Color Code? Watch What is The Color Code? (Dr. Taylor Hartman, 7 min): youtu.be/T-MHJyxj2II

Color Code - Blue

Driven by feelings and connection · Empath

Watch: the Blue personality
Dr. Taylor Hartman · 6 min
youtu.be/rHTcrtI8GV4

Strengths

As an individual

- Sees life as a serious endeavor
- Sincere and emotionally deep
- Analytically oriented
- High achiever

Limitations

As an individual

- Highly emotional
- Smug and self-righteous
- Controlling and/or envious of others' success when too easily obtained
- Strong perfecting and performance orientation

Color Code - Red

Driven by action and goals · Results-oriented

Watch: the Red personality
Dr. Taylor Hartman · 6 min
youtu.be/C-h4jt1L35I

Strengths

As an individual

- Excels with logical thinking
- Committed to a productive lifestyle
- Dynamic and direct
- Thrives on independence
- Natural leader
- Highly resourceful (strong survivor)
- Creative in crisis

Limitations

As an individual

- Promotes turmoil and conflict when a personal goal is to be gained
- Rationalizes and denies own failings
- Always right
- Often arrogant and defiant of authority
- Impatient with others

Color Code - White

Driven by peace · Wallflower

Strengths

As an individual

- Quiet, reflective, and peaceful
- Sincere and genuine lifestyle
- Patient with others
- Blends into all situations

Limitations

As an individual

- Unresponsive or not openly excited about experiences
- Has problems becoming intimate
- Bashful and unsure of self
- Often lazy and unwilling to take responsibility to self
- Resists making commitments

Watch: the White personality
Dr. Taylor Hartman · 6 min
youtu.be/Ds7I8wZ-fBw

Color Code - Yellow

Driven by fun and enjoyment

Strengths

As an individual

- Highly optimistic (rarely depressed)
- Likes self and accepts others easily
- Loves to volunteer for opportunities
- Sees life as an experience to be enjoyed
- Adventurous and daring

Limitations

As an individual

- Needs to look good socially (high priority)
- Irresponsible and unreliable
- Self-centered and egotistical
- Superficial and mostly interested in a good time
- Exaggerates successes and omits unpleasant truths
- Unable to confront or face issues

Watch: the Yellow personality
Dr. Taylor Hartman · 6 min
youtu.be/t_VE06O6Aro

Group Courtesies

- We ask you to share, but no one should feel pressured to participate and may pass.
- Look on the group sessions as a place for everyone to process their options, and not just a venting place for yourself. Limit your sharing so that others in the group will be able to share.
- Try to share from the heart as honestly as you can. You can cry, laugh, be angry in the group, without the fear of condemnation from others.
- Please do not sit in judgement on another group member or verbally attack another group member.
- Please...NO CROSS TALK. Cross talk occurs when individuals speak out of turn and interrupt one another. The group is disrupted, and it loses its focus of respect for the member whose turn it is to speak.
- Avoid offering suggestions or methods of fixing. We are here to listen, to support, and to be supported by each other in the group, not to give advice. Please save any questions until after the group is dismissed.
- Speak in the "I" form instead of "we", "they", or "you." This helps us take responsibility for our feelings and accept them as being valid.Examples: "I believe....," rather than "They say...." "I felt angry that....," rather than "She made me so angry...."
- We ask that you respect the anonymity and confidentiality of each person in this meeting.

Group Questions

Icebreaker What's your name, and what's one small thing that brought you joy this week?

Answer from whichever level fits where you are tonight. It's fine to stay in Start.

Start

JUST STARTING OUT

1. Who is someone in your life you feel safe with? What makes them feel safe?

2. Which color do you think you might be, and why?

Go deeper

APPLY TONIGHT'S IDEAS

3. Which "Safe People Are" trait matters most to you in a friend?

4. Think of someone whose color is different from yours. How might knowing their color change how you see them?

Stretch

FOR A BIGGER CHALLENGE

5. "Because you love them, does not make them safe." Where has that been true in your life?

6. Which of your color's limitations shows up most in your relationships?

Take-home: Know your color

1. Take the free Color Code test (scan the code, or go to colorcode.com/free_personality_test).
2. Watch the video for your color. The QR codes are on the color pages of this handout.
3. This week, notice one moment your color showed up, and one safe person's color.
4. Bring what you noticed to next week's class.

Free Color Code test
colorcode.com/
free_personality_test

My color: _____

A moment my color showed up:

A safe person in my life, and their color:

What surprised me: